Body to He Brought Heregand Lie in State in City Hall on Wichnesday-To Be Buried Beside Old (lomrades in Cypress Bills-A Remirkable Career.

Hiram Cronk, sole surviver of the War of 1812, who celebrated the 105th anniversary of his birth on April 29 last, died yesterday morning at his home at Dunnbrook, N. Y. by the Board of Aldermen here last winter have a public funeral in this city and will be buried in Cypress Hills Cemetery. Brooklyn, where are interred the bodies of about fifty of his fellow soldiers of the War of 1812. His body will also lie in state in the City Hall. For a long time Mr. Cronkshad hovered between life and death. He was blind and deal and was only able occasionally to mumble a few words which no one could understand except his damghter and his son-in-law, with whom he passed the last few years of his life. For a long time he kept no track of the measons or of the days of the week, and he found it impossible to remember events from day to day. He spent most of his time sleeping and often let-days go by without uttering a word. Despite his infirmities he began about a year ago to cut several new teeth, and new hair began to grow on a spot of his scalp that had been bald time out of memory. Hiram Cronk was the last of a family of nine abildren, being a son of James Cronk. He was born at Frankfort, Herkimer county, on April 29, 1800. The family originally came from Holland and its members were the claimants for the Cronk, or Cronkite estate, which was supposed to exist there and to be worth many millions.

Near the close of the War of 1812, when Hiram was 14 years old, he enlisted in the United States Army with his father and his brothers, John and Jeptha, serving at Sackett's Harbor about 100 days. Hiram was so young and so slight of build that he was the butt of jokes by the other soldiers, but in a skirmish with the British he behaved so well that he was highly praised by his commanding officer. He was honorably discharged on Nov. 16,

At the time of the excavation for the Erie canal Mr. Cronk was employed on the work and he used to tell of seeing Gov. De Witt Clinton fall into the ditch as the result of a trick played by mischievous boys. He also remembered Gen. Lafayette's trip through the State on a barge at the time the canal died a few years ago.

For many years Hiram was an itinerant shoemsker. He used to be a great tobacco chewer and he also drank a gallon of wine every two weeks. Before his health failed he was of a jovial disposition and nothing pleased him better than to tell stories of his early life. He cast his first vote for Andrew Jackson and through all the years Andrew Jackson and through as the safterward he remained a Democrat, ossting his last vote for Grover Cleveland. He was a devout Methodist and before he got blind he spent a portion of each day reading the Bible. When he was 100 years and thore was a family reunion and none;

Hiram was an honorary member of the Fort Stanwix Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution, also of the State and National chapters. On his 105th birthday last month he was visited by representatives of the Society of the War of 1812 from varior the Society of the war of 1812 from various places and to him was presented a certificate of honorary membership in the New Jersey branch. He also received letters of congratulation from many prominent men, including Admiral Dewey, Lieut.-Gen. Chaffee, Gov. Higgins, Gov. Stokes of New Jersey, and ex-Gov. Bulkeley of Connections.

This is the resolution which the Aldermen passed last December in anticipation of Mr. Cronk's death:

of Mr. Cronk's death:

Whereas, This sole survivor of that memorable war may at almost any noment be visited by the "pule horse and its grim rider," it is therefore meet and titting that the chief city of the Empire State should lead in honoring by a soldier's burial the last of the many illustrious heroes of that war, thereby inculating in the hearts and minds of the young particite feelings and sentiments, and reminding the older ones that they who serve their country faithfully during peril and ingaston should never be forgotten by the generations that come after, therefore be it.

Resolved, That in the event of the death of this noble hero the president of this board be authorized to direct that the remains lie in state in the City Hall, Borough of Manhattan, New York city, and that the Freeident also appoint a suitable committee and guard of honor for the same.

WOMAN SEEMED TO BE DRUGGED. Taken From a Cab in 21st Street, She Became Insensible at Once. A woman who had every appearance of suffering from the effects of a drug was found, shortly after 11 o'clock last night, in a cab in front of 245 West Twenty-first street. When she was helped out of the cab she was in a comatose condition but able to walk with assistance.

As soon as she sat down on the stoop, she became unconscious. A crowd surrounded her quickly and the crowd brought Policeman Schedel of the West Twentieth street station. Some of the bystanders accordance with the arrangements made | told him the woman had been in the cab and Schedel arrested Robert Thompson, the driver. The woman and the cabman were taken to the police station. Dr. Gillespie of the New York Hospital was summoned. He said there was no doubt that the woman had been drinking, but she might have had knockout drops, too. He took her to the hospital. She was still unconscious.

The woman is about 38 years old, of fair complexion and was dressed in a dark, tailor made suit. The police found out after the woman was taken to the hospital that she had been with another woman and a man who seemed very well able to take care of themselves. The trio came through Twenty-first street from Eighth avenue, the sober couple supporting the woman between them. In front of 245 West Twenty-first street they placed the woman in a sitting posture or the stoop.

Then the man hurried around to the Grand Opera House, where he found Thompson, the cabman. He asked Thompson if he wanted to make some money, got into the cab and told the cabman to drive around to Twenty-first street.

By the time it got there the sober weman had disappeared. The unconscious woman was assisted into the cab and the doors shut on her. The man then told the cabman that some of the woman's relatives lived a few houses down the street, and he would go and consult them. He started off, and that was the last seen of him. In the woman's stocking was a letter addressed to Miss Mackay, 830 Sixth avenue.

DRAGGED BY TROLLEY CAR

Woman Dies of Injuries-Car Started as She Got On-Foot Caught in Step.

Mrs. Emily Voetch, 65 years old, of 645 East Fifty-fifth street, attempted to board a north bound Mount Vernon car at 158th street and Melrose avenue, The Bronx, last night when the car started. Mrs. Voetch's foot was caught in some way in the step and she was dragged for nearly a block before the car was stopped. Her clothing was torn from her and she was unconscious when she was taken to Lincoln Hospital. Among her injuries was a fractured skull. She died on the operating table at the hospital.

William Hepburn, the conductor of the car, was arrested. He was inside the car, which was crowded, and, it is alleged, he gave the signal to go ahead when some man yelled from the back platform that it was all right. Coroner O'Gorman was trying to learn last night how the woman's foot became caught in the car step, for the witnesses agree that it did.

Senator Raines said that he was confident the Ambier measure would not be signed because the legal advisors of the Governor had taken the position that a tax certificate held by a hotel owner had a property value and as such it could not be arbitrarily confiscated.

Senator Raines went on to say that the Senator Raines went on to say that the bills which had been introduced by himself and Senator Lewis and which had been passed and would become effective immediately would meet the situation in this city. These bills provide that a license may be revoked in case it is found that a hotel keeper is conducting a disorderly house and prohib,'t a convicted holder of a license transferring that license to some other person. other person.

Speaking on the gas situation, Mr. Raines said that he did not think any further effort to regulate the price of lighting in this city would be taken up at the coming special session of the Legislature, inasmuch as Gov. Higgins was of the opinion that the commission which had been provided for had adequate power to cope with this
